Value Play of the Day

Race #4

#6 Saint Goar

He didn't get the greatest of trips last time out, and to be frank, he probably should have won that day. This is perhaps the most versatile and honest horse at PID, and he never fails to give 110% each time that he steps foot on the track. A very versatile type, he can run on anything and can pretty much be a chameleon when it comes to his racing style. He has a big shot today if he can stay a little closer to the probable pacesetter in Diamond Dust. Look for 3/1 or better today.

Spot Play of Day

#4 Naughty Favors

Conditioner Kevin Rice drops this mare into a much easier spot after getting beat up in the 1X last time out. She ran a pretty decent race two back in the SOC, only getting beat a length and a half in that event. Her speed figures fit in this spot, even though a few others are close to her, the fact that she is not coming from off the bench factors in as a better selection in my opinion. She has a good amount of back class, especially compared to this group, and now with this precipitous drop, she looks to have a Kodak moment today.
